Six Bill Repeat Al Schneider

This is a trick for those building a professional show. This trick uses a small stack of what appears to be about twenty dollar bills. This trick fits well near the middle of the act. It would not make a good opener, second trick or a closer for a show. It would best be done after a complex trick or some thick that gets a strong shocking response from the audience. This trick is intended to inject a bit of humor into the show. This would be a good trick to jazz up to inject your personality into the performance. It packs small and can be contained in a pocket before performance. It can be done surrounded. If you are building an illusion show, this trick will fit well as an interlude performed in front of the curtain with a spotlight on you. It has been performed for over a hundred years and sells very well with audiences. It works well in adult shows as well as children's shows. Those that use this routine, claim that they must use it in every show. The trick requires no sleight of hand. Patter is included that is a bit tongue in cheek humor. This is an excellent routine for a beginner in magic. This booklet shows how to make the trick from real dollar bills or plain paper that looks like play money. With a bit of creativity, a personal computer could easily be used to make the bills used in this trick.
